

TRANSITION REVIEW No.TS0002

Transition review of the UK trade remedies countervailing measure concerning certain rainbow trout originating in Turkey.

Note to the file

The Secretary of State for International Trade (the Secretary of State) invites all UK upstream and downstream companies of the goods covered in this transition review to complete the relevant questionnaire attached with this note.

These questionnaires are for UK-based companies operating upstream or downstream in the supply chain for the like goods and/or for the goods subject to review. For precise definitions of like goods and goods subject to review, please see the questionnaire. Upstream companies will generally be suppliers of inputs (goods, equipment or services), while downstream companies may include users, distributors or end consumers of the goods.

The information from these questionnaires will be used when we conduct the Economic Interest Test, which is carried out to assess whether our preliminary decision is in the economic interest of the UK.

If your company is part of an upstream or downstream industry for these goods, please complete the relevant questionnaire. Also, if you know of other parties who are involved in these industries and who would like to complete this questionnaire, please direct them to the Trade Remedies Service registration page where they can create an account, register their interest in the case and complete the relevant questionnaire.

Please note that we will publish the information you provide in this questionnaire on our public file, as part of our normal investigation process. If your response contains information you feel is confidential, please include a non-confidential version and explain why that information is considered confidential. Please submit your questionnaire via the Trade Remedies Service (www.trade-remedies.service.gov.uk) by 07 September 2020.
